PLOWING TOBACCO STALKS AID TO PEST CONTROL

Plowing up tobacco stalks after harvest will help control a serious crop pest, says S. B. Fenne, plant disease specialist at V. P. I.

He advises growers to cut and destroy stalks above the ground, and then plow up the roots.

Exposing roots to the sun, he said will kill root knot nomatodes, which are a serious pest of tobacco as many other crops, especially in sandy soils.

The uprooting should be done as soon as possible after harvest. Otherwise, roots will begin to disintegrate and allow the worms to remain in the soil.

The practices also will help reduce the amount of mosaic disease on next year's tobacco crop.

HOT WATER BY WIRE!

of course, it's electric!

AN AUTOMATIC electric water heater maintains a constant and plentiful supply of HOT water at all times—and at low cost. It takes only 1¢ worth of electricity to heat 4 gallons of water!

And—it will eliminate the costly use of your furnace coil that gives poor service at best in the winter and none at all in the summer. Tests have proved that the furnace coil consumes 20% of the heat from the fuel you burn in your furnace during the heating season. Then, too, the water temperature varies from scalding hot to lukewarm—often in inadequate amounts.

HOT WATER BY WIRE is as safe and clean as electric light . . . and once your automatic heater is installed you can forget it, whether you're at home or away. It costs so little. . . . Of Course, it's ELECTRIC!

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Now They're Sitting Pretty

Sam Taylor, who's working as a telephone lineman, was telling me about some birds that got into a fight with his company.

It was a couple of woodpeckers and they'd climbed right in a telephone pole number 9 behind them flicking there, but they kept pecking at the wires — causing one short circuit after another.

Finally, the telephone people — who had nothing personal against the birds — just stopped up the hole where they lived. But they kept coming back. At last, the company donated that pole to the woodpeckers and set up a brand-new one for their own use!

From where I sit, we'd all be better off if we were as tolerant with our own kind as that telephone outfit was with the woodpeckers. Let's consider the other fellow's point of view — whether it's his right to live where he wants, or to enjoy a friendly glass of temperate beer or ale when and if he pleases.

AIR TRANSPORTATION FOR FOOD INCREASES

Increased transportation by air for agricultural products is foreseen by Dr. J. L. Maxton, Extension Service marketing specialist.

Dr. Maxton says there is an accompanying need for changes in harvesting, processing, packaging, and marketing to better fit air transport of foods. "Air-borne operations bypass much of our conventional handling and storing," he says. Lighter packaging and crating must be used, and the speed of air transport must give enough added value to the food to offset the higher costs for transportation.

He points out that perishable haulings by air increased from 45 million ton miles in 1946 to 116 million ton miles in 1948.

The increase came after a USDA cost analysis that indicated transportation by air was from 10 to 15 cents per ton mile. (In 1494, certified airlines were charging 70 cents per ton mile for freight.)

Maxton reports that in June, 1948 the Civil Aeronautics Board established air freight rates for general commodities at ten cents a ton mile for the first 1,000 miles and 13 cents per ton mile thereafter.

STATION STUDYING POULTRY MARKETING

Seasonal surpluses have long given the poultry producer trouble, and the Virginia Experiment Station in cooperation with eight other southern states aims to do something about it.

Work in Virginia, explains Researcher E. C. Wilson, is designed to give comparisons between commercial and non-commercial areas of production, and to find the most efficient way of marketing eggs.

The survey will determine the present methods, practices, and results in marketing direct by producers, and by and through local agencies. Included in the survey are 650 producers and 120 local agencies.

As a supplement, a current report of egg prodution and sales is being obtained monthly from producers and dealers.
